MIRANDA KERR
Makeup artist Rose-Marie Swift and hairstylist David Keough create a punk-meets-pretty look

EYES
"I did a stronger brow," says makeup artist Swift, who then used a creamy brown shadow on the lids. "I wanted to make a statement without going overboard."

HAIR
Hairstylist Keough created a "classy but edgy" look by combing hair over one side of her head while tuck small braids on the other.

LIPS
"To add a little drama, we did a dark cherry lip," says Swift.

SKIN
After Swift applied foundation, she added a creamy luminizer to Kerr's cheeks to keep her youthful glow.

Hollywood volume

"Making women look sexy" is one of Keough's hair mantras. In his three decades in the business, he has created cutting-edge styles for glossy magazines worldwide, as well as working with fashion brands such as BCBGMAXAZRIA and TIGERIT. He's been a creative consultant for John Frieda for 10 years and his A-list clientele includes the likes of Elle Macpherson and Toni Collette.

"You have to start adding volume to the hair from the moment you wash it," says Keough of creating this luscious look. He suggests using a volumising shampoo and conditioner to start, followed by a volumising spray "spritzed into towel-dried hair from mid-lengths to the ends". Try John Frieda Luscious Volume Fine to Full Blow-Out Spray ($17, 800-488-388). Next, after, such as John Frieda Luscious Volume Root Booster Blow-Dry Lotion ($14, 800-488-388), will also give more body to the hair, says Keough, "especially if your hair is on the finer side." Using a large, round brush, blow-dry the hair fully then, with a 1.5cm curling iron, curl the hair in 25mm sections, "pinning each section with clips until the hair has cooled." Take the clips out and use a paddle brush to loosen up the curls. Finish with a light mist of hairspray to set the look.
