WINGED LINER

The benefit: lifted eyes

Ever had "the look" (one too many times lately)? Put down the concealer and pick up the eyeliner. The outer corners of your brows and the inner corner of your eyes tend to be the ultimate "lookers," says Dubroff. "A wing at the outer corner gives eyes a nice lift."

Apply with purpose:

Always use a dark shade (except for the inner corner). "It's like a 'hook line' that pulls the eye in," says Dubroff. Urban Decay 24/7 Eye Liner in black ($18, urbandecyclub.com) CoverGirl BonBon Intensity Liner by LashBlast in Chocolate Kiss ($7, covergirl.com) and eyeliner pencils don't provide enough definition because they can be off-center.

Start with the wing—Dubroff "matches the length to the outermost brow hairs" and works your way backward, making the line thinner as you move inward.

PASTEL EYE SHADOW

The benefit: larger, brighter eyes

Everyone has them: a good everyday basic, but it's also pretty blah. With light colors, you're making a flashback to your eyes, making them appear bigger and brighter, says makeup artist A.J. Crimson.

Apply with purpose:

Always use a dark shade (except for the inner corner), which can make eyes look tired. But if you want to make them look more vibrant, Robin's egg blue will make eye whites look whiter (try Urban Decay 24/7 Eye Liner in Lido, $5, at urbandecyclub.com), pale peach is a sparkly shade (try Urban Decay Enhanced 14/16 Eye Shadow in Imbibe, $17.95, at urbandecyclub.com), and bright green will enhance the green flecks in your eyes (try Maybelline New York Expressive Eyeshadow in Emerald Smokes, $5, at maybelline.com). The color will naturally affect by choosing a shade with a hint of shimmer.

To keep the look fresh, first apply a peach-colored shadow, says Dubroff. Then layer on a bright green shade to where they meet your browbone. The finishing touch: heaps of black mascara.

cheek performance

A case for choosing peach blush instead of pink

> It's universally flattering. The golden undertones in peach adapt well to many skin tones, says Crimson.

> It looks as bronzed. Instead of applying to the apples, create an underline of color that tapers to where they meet your jawline, says Crimson.

> It detracts from dark circles. Orange is opposite blue on the color wheel, so according to basic color theory, applying a bright orange on the cheekbones can counteract blue tones under your eyes.

SHOW-OFF SPOT:

Upper chest

There's a lot you want to get off their chests—most notably, sunspots and those pesky vertical lines that pop up in your thirties. A cool-weather cream, like Merle Norman Advanced Retinol Night Treatment ($109, merlenorman.com), builds up collagen to tackle both problems.

Start with a pea-size dab at night, and gradually work up to every night.

For a faster fix, blur Merle Norman's dusted gold-toned shimmer powder over your collarbone. Try Victoria's Secret Beach Sexy Bronzing Shimmer Powder ($4, victoriassecret.com).

Sneak-a-Peek Skin

Make the most of spring's hottest fashion trend—dresses and skirts with strategic cutouts that expose flashes of your chest, waist, and other alluring body parts—with our glow-ifying pointers.
