SHOPPING
DECONSTRUCTED

WHY DOES THIS SWIMSUIT COST $525?

LAB-TESTED: The fabric is washed, stretched, microwaved, and bombarded with light in a Paris laboratory to ensure elasticity and color.

MATERIAL WEALTH: The resilient, quick-drying blend of nylon and spandex is made especially for Eres. But the secret weapon is in the finish—a company secret they call a “magic bath” that coats the fabric and shields against sun and water damage.

BUTTONED UP: Buttons on the back, covered in suit fabric, are flat for sunbathing comfort.

TLC: Care for an Eres by hand-washing with baby shampoo, and it could last a lifetime.

SIGNATURE STRIPES: White piping is stitched in between the edges of the suit, creating a timeless look. Color tests prove it won't bleed.

SEE WORTHY
■ French label Eres has earned cult status with its classic, sexy bathing suits that boast an Eiffel Tower's worth of engineering. Wear this suit eight hours a day during a two-week vacation, and the cost per wear is...

IN STITCHES: Double whipstitching holds the suit firmly
