The image shows the cover of the September 2011 issue of Vogue India. The cover features a portrait of actress Nargis Fakhri. She is wearing a black dress with a vibrant teal or turquoise asymmetrical panel across the chest and waist. She has long, dark, wavy hair and is looking directly at the camera with a slight smile. The magazine title 'VOGUE' is at the top in large white letters, with 'INDIA' in smaller letters between the 'O' and 'G'. Below the title, on the left, is the text 'SEP 2011 ₹100'. To the right of the title, it says '5 STEPS TO ROCK-STAR ABS'. On the left side, below the title, is the headline 'HELLO NARGIS FAKHRI! MEET BOLLYWOOD'S BEST-KEPT SECRET'. On the right side, below the '5 STEPS' headline, is the text 'PLUS: MOHAMMED HANIF ISABEL MARANT EMMA WATSON'. At the bottom right, in large white letters, is 'BIG BRIGHT FASHION'. At the bottom left, on a teal diagonal banner, is the text 'YOUR ESSENTIAL GUIDE TO FASHION'S NIGHT OUT'. At the bottom center, there is a list of three bullet points: '• Looks to covet from the world's style capitals', '• How to wear head-to-toe colour', and '• The new shoe designers you'll love'.

what she's wearing "A Moschino dress, Valentina Kova necklace, Efva Attling bracelet, and my own rings."

village voice "I've grown up in the same suburb my whole life. This is my first time in the States! I come from a big, loud family, and I'm the quieter one. Performing is something I have to switch on. I've heard I get real sassy onstage, which I'm not in real life! It's fun to be that person for an hour a night. My family keeps me grounded—if I don't do something my dad asks, he's like, 'You're not going out tonight.' It's easy to forget you're not a big deal to anyone you know."

true life "I started writing music when I was around twelve. My current record company saw a video of me performing at my school's talent show. My lyrics are about something that's happened to me or a friend. I've been told by people my age that they can relate to stuff I'm saying, which is so important to me. But my friends get annoyed. They're like, 'You can't write about us in songs anymore. People are going to hear it!'" practical magic "I love thrift shopping. You can get ten things because everything costs, like, three dollars. I feel weird spending money on myself—my first big purchase will be a double bed! I like simple clothes, but sometimes I'll go for a goth-witch vibe."

queen bee "I came up with the name Lorde after looking through aristocratic titles. 'Lord' is a supermasculine word, so I added an 'e' to make it feminine. [Her real name is Ella Yelich-O'Connor.] I like the musician James Blake, but I also listen to Drake and Nicki Minaj. For me, rapping is a barely contained dream. When it comes to career goals, if I think of myself as cool in five years, then I'm doing all right." □
